You have been given a local anaesthetic throat spray, to numb your throat during the procedure.

- You should have nothing to eat or drink until:
- After this you may eat and drink normally.

What will happen after my test?

Part of having a gastroscopy at North Devon District Hospital involves having some biopsies. Biopsies are not always necessary if all appeared normal. Some biopsies are sent to the laboratory to be analysed by a pathologist. The results will either be sent to your GP or you will have an appointment in the outpatient's department to discuss the results with your hospital doctor.

When can I eat and drink again?

The local anaesthetic wears off after 30 minutes. Usually the nurse in recovery will check your swallowing with sips of cold water. This is to check and to make sure the normal sensation has returned. You can eat and drink as normal, unless advised otherwise. You may prefer to start with light foods before returning to your normal eating habits.

When I am at home, what if I feel unwell after the procedure?

You may or may not encounter any of the following conditions:

- Sore throat: hoarse voice: You may experience a sore throat or hoarse voice. This is not unusual, and this should ease within a day or so.
- Bleeding: It is normal to cough up small amounts of blood in your sputum particularly if you had lots of biopsies. This is fairly rare and should settle within a day. If the bleeding persists for more than 24 hours and/or gets heavier, please consult your doctor for immediate medical advice.

- Fever: This is extremely rare after a gastroscopy. A high temperature above 38 degrees may indicate that you may have developed an infection after your procedure. If this happens, please consult your doctor for immediate medical advice.
- Abdominal pain and bloating: Abdominal discomfort is fairly common after a gastroscopy. Some patients have discomfort due to air that is put into the stomach during the test, but this will subside rapidly.

Medications

You may resume normal medications after your gastroscopy, unless advised otherwise

If you take blood thinning medications please restart them on

When will I get my results?

A nurse will speak to you before you leave the Gemini Endoscopy Suite and explain:

- What was seen and done during your procedure
- Whether you will need any further follow up
- A scanned copy of your report will be sent to your GP today and any results should be with your GP within 2 weeks

What if I need further advice and assistance?
